

Domestic & Family Violence Assistance Statement and Policy

If you need immediate help

Please call 000 right away if you are currently experiencing or at risk of experiencing violence and need immediate assistance from emergency services.

If you believe that someone may be monitoring your devices, try to visit our website from a safe phone, computer, or tablet, and remember to clear your browser's history afterward.

The eSafety Online Safety Checklist provides free technical instructions to help you identify if your devices are being monitored.

Our statement

Vonex has procedures and policies in place to help protect the safety of our customers who are experiencing domestic and family violence, or non-domestic sexual violence.

These processes are designed to ensure customers affected by domestic, family violence, or non-domestic sexual violence can access support, maintain essential telecommunications services and manage their accounts in a way that prioritises their safety and privacy.

Why your safety is our priority

Domestic, family, and sexual violence can affect anyone and take many forms. It may include physical, emotional, psychological, economic, financial, non-domestic sexual or technology-facilitated abuse, as well as controlling or coercive behaviour that makes you feel unsafe.

At Vonex, your safety always comes first. We are committed to helping affected people stay connected to essential services and support networks that matter most by following careful procedures that protect your privacy and respect your choices each step of the way.

How we help you stay connected

We listen and help. Our teams are trained to respond with discretion and sensitivity whenever you may disclose any safety concerns and take steps to minimise harm and prevent any risk to you.

If you are experiencing or affected by domestic, family, or sexual violence, we will always verify that it is safe and secure to talk before we update your details or make any changes to your services.

You do not need to provide evidence of your experience of violence to receive immediate assistance from us under this policy, unless it is necessary to protect your personal safety.

From here, we will work with you to provide support and find the best options for your situation and keep you connected to essential communication services.

If you are the account holder, we can help with:

- Providing new mobile numbers or prepaid or private number options
- Performing SIM swaps
- Changing or cancelling mobile and Internet service plans (e.g., postpaid to prepaid)
- Restoring services previously cancelled due to non-payment (where possible)
- Arranging flexible payment plans or fee waivers

If you are not the account holder, we can help with:

- Setting up a new mobile or prepaid mobile number and service
- Setting up a new private home number on a new account
- Moving existing services into an independent account

For urgent reconnections

Where a service has been restricted, suspended, or disconnected, and you indicate you may be experiencing domestic and family violence or sexual violence and have concerns about your safety, we will work to reverse the service limiting action as a matter of urgency.

In cases where a reversal is not practical, we will work with you to provide an equivalent telecommunications service to ensure you stay connected and supported.

Support with your bills and payments

We understand that domestic, family or non-domestic sexual violence can impact your financial security and ability to pay for telecommunications services. As such, you may qualify for financial hardship assistance.

Before taking any debt recovery action, we will consider your circumstances and whether another person is responsible for the bill to find a safe path forward.

For additional support and information, please read our Financial Hardship Policy.

How we protect your information

We know that reaching out for support isn't always easy, and your privacy is important to us.

This is why:

- Anything you tell us remains confidential unless you give explicit consent
- You won't need to explain your situation each time you contact us
- We use your preferred method of contact whenever possible to keep you secure
- We protect your information in line with the Privacy Act 1988 (Cth) and the Australian Privacy Principles

If we haven't got it right

We want to make sure you feel safe and supported throughout the entire process.

If you are not happy or feel dissatisfied with the help you receive from us, you can:

- Lodge a complaint through our website
- Call our customer support team directly

If you feel we are unable to resolve your concern together, you also have the option to contact the Telecommunications Industry Ombudsman (TIO) for free, independent assistance.

Our commitment and standards to you

This policy and the supporting procedures are actively maintained by Vonex.

Vonex will apply inclusive design principles in the development and review of its systems, processes and telecommunications products to identify and reduce risks to affected persons.

Vonex will also apply an intersectional approach when supporting consumers who are, or may be, experiencing domestic and family violence or non-domestic sexual violence. This means we recognise that every individual may have unique needs and circumstances shaped by their cultural, environmental, and structural background. We are committed to delivering assistance that is sensitive, appropriate, and tailored to your specific situation.
